Like the other created colonial capital of East Africa, Nairobi, Dar es Salaam quickly became a mixture of both the older Swahili tradition of urbanization and the result of the efforts of Europeans to create their vision of a tropical colonial city. It became a segregated city, with sectors for European, Asian, and African settlement.

African Underclass: Urbanisation, Class and Colonial Order

Most African urban crime, as Burton observes, is directed against the poorest. But we do not hear from the poorest. The African voices in this book are those of an educated, largely Christian, African elite, alienated from most of the cultural manifestations of city life and concerned to defend property and propriety.
